Never say that you have reached the end of the road
Even though darkness obscures the blue sky.
The hour we yearn for will yet come
And our footsteps will thunder: We are here.

From the green land of palm trees to the white land of snow
We are here with our pain, our agony.
And wherever a drop of our blood is shed
There blooms our courage, our strength.

The morning sun will gild the day
And the darkness of yesterday will vanish.
But if the dawning sun shall be delayed
Let this song be a watchword from generation to generation.

This song is written in blood, not lead.
It is not the call of a bird dying free
But of people trapped between crumbling walls
Who sang it with guns in their hands.

(English translation by Helen Kieval)

Hirsh Glick penned the words to the famous partisan song Zog nit keynmol az du geyst dem letstn veg in May of 1943 as reports of the Warsaw ghetto uprising spread throughout Europe. Despite their desperate situation, news of the revolt heartened the fighters of the Jewish resistance, and the defiant hymn became their de facto anthem. Yet the liquidation of the ghetto was never in doubt, and the song was literally one of “people trapped between crumbling walls/who sang it with guns in their hands.” In the aftermath of the twentieth century, these words echo the damnable chronic failure of civilization and humanity in the present era. They indict us all.
